The Late Effects of Polio (LEoP)

What are the LEoP?

Years after contracting polio, an increasing number of polio survivors are developing a range of new symptoms with potentially debilitating health effects, manifesting primarily as bio-mechanical and/or neurological decline; this condition is known as the LEoP.

Who Do the LEoP Affect?

People living with the LEoP make up the largest physical disability group in Australia. Australia is now free of new cases of polio and most of those affected are over 60 years of age. However, migrants arriving from countries where polio was eradicated more recently have led to a younger cohort of polio survivors.

Symptoms of the LEoP

Symptoms of the LEoP vary considerably, both in range and severity, but commonly include:

- chronic fatigue;
- muscle and/or joint pain;
- muscle weakness and atrophy;
- muscle spasms/twitching;
- respiratory and sleep problems;
- swallowing and speech difficulties; and
- cold and heat intolerance.

Polio Australia

Vision: All polio survivors in Australia have access to appropriate health care and the support required to maintain independence and make informed life choices.

Mission: Polio Australia is committed to standardising quality polio information and service provision across Australia for polio survivors.

- Purpose:
- To educate Australian polio survivors and their families and community about the LEoP.
 - To source and provide best practice information, education and training to health professionals to improve the diagnosis/management of the LEoP.
 - To facilitate the provision of appropriate and consistent health and other support services.
 - To advise governments on policy development and programs.
 - To stimulate research into the LEoP.

Australian Polio Register

The Australian Polio Register was established in 2010 to gather information on the numbers of polio survivors living in Australia today.

Polio Australia encourages every polio survivor living in Australia — regardless of the country where you contracted polio — to add your details to the Australian Polio Register.
